

Manufacturing Facilities

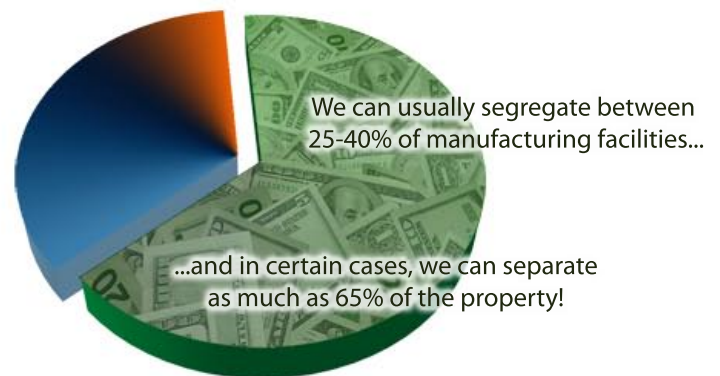

Cost Segregation Studies

Industrious Accounting Principles Forge Tax Savings

There are as many types of manufacturing facilities as there are products on the market: from ultra-modern, high-tech systems that run silently and efficiently to noisy factories churning out the necessities of modern life. With our years of experience, we're familiar with every kind of production facility out there, and we have the expertise to maximize our manufacturing clients' tax savings.

Every manufacturing facility has a great deal of specialized mechanical, electrical, and plumbing systems, along with the associated gas, electric, water, and air hookups. Each type of manufacturing has its own advantages for cost segregation purposes. High-tech facilities often have clean rooms and the associated HVAC and electric systems. Traditional plants will often have more land improvements to accommodate the heavy truck traffic.

Whatever type of facility you have, there are substantial savings to be found both inside and outside the walls of your manufacturing center.
